COURSE ON NORTH AMERICAN JUDAISM GIVEN AT LOYOLA

A course on North American Judaism is being given this year in Loyola's Department of Theological Studies through the endowment of the Jewish Chautauqua Society, an educational project of the National Federation of Temple Brotherhoods.

Taught by Professor David Rome, historian and librarian, it marks the 147th course in Judaism sponsored by the Society.

The course studies the many aspects of contemporary Judaism. It examines Jewish traditions and theology and Judaism as it relates to Israel and to Jewish literature, sociology and folklore.

The Jewish Chautauqua Society and the Department of Theological Studies have been offering courses in Judaism at Loyola since 1967.
